THE TRAILS OF THE DEVIL

SCENE ONE:

Description Night has settled heavily over the village. Outside, a bitter wind drives snow against the wooden walls of a worn tavern. The sign above the door creaks endlessly. The Witcher steps inside.

Warmth greets her—but not comfort. Conversations fade the moment he enters. Eyes follow her, then quickly look away. The smell of stale ale, damp wood, and something unspoken fills the air. She takes a seat in the far corner. Back to the wall. Always.

A hooded man approaches. Slow. Careful. He sits across without asking.

Dialogue(Erdesax): You're a Witcher.

Dialogue(Witcher): Observation's impressive. You are a human.

Dialogue(Erdesax) Erdesax. I... We have a problem, a huge one! Something more valuable than all the golds in kovir!

Dialogue(Witcher): They all say that. So I hope you already have all the coins of the kovir.

Dialogue(Erdesax): If you don't help me… a demon will return to this world.

Choices

1. Go on. (Go to SCENE TWO)
2. Not my problem. (Witcher leaves the conversation))
3. Depends on the pay. (Go to SCENE THREE)

SCENE TWO:

Dialogue(Witcher): Go on. I want to hear the rest.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Centuries ago, when the orbs met, some demons land on ours. Most of them are sent where they came from, rest are still hiding in the shadows. But one particular demon is on the run! He will be free if we can't stop the riturel! It has already begun!

Dialogue(Witcher): And you want me to stop it? I heard the stories about demons, I am not sure if there is a person who is strong enough to deal with them.

Dialogue(Erdesax): That is the thing witcher, we are not trying to kill a demon, we are trying to make sure we had captured it.

Dialogue(Witcher): What is the name of the demon?

Dialogue(Erdesax): You should have already know witcher, if we know the real name we would capture it easily but we don't know.

Dialogue(Witcher): Well I tried my chance. Let's say I accepted the offer. What we need to do? How we can be sure it is locked up?

Dialogue(Erdesax): The rituel that put him into that cage! The book of the old prists of other worlds. The book is older than you and it is. We need to take it secretly, we need a heart of a leshen...

Dialogue(Witcher): Heart of a leshen? Is there something like that?

Dialogue(Erdesax): Yes indeed! If a person is cursed, you can take it before the heart is turns into roots and leafs.

Dialogue(Witcher): So we need to curse someone? How perfect it is.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Well, actually there is one. An old friend who gave himself so that the thousands can live. that is why I am here to seek a help for this improtant job. Now we can make sure the seal is holds strong!

Dialogue(Witcher): Prists and some strange choices. Always trying to play the hero. Anything else? Or is that all?

Dialogue(Erdesax): It is all. Here the map of both places. So you can start whereever you want.

Dialogeu(Witcher): Aren't you comming?

Dialogue(Erdesax): If I was a warrior who could kill a leshen do you think I would be here, looking for a witcher? But here your advance and little of an advice, use fire against the beast. There will be more of it when we meet on the place that I crossed on the map.

Choice

1. Leshen (Go to SCENE FOUR)
2. The Book (Go to SCENE FIVE)
3. Not today. I have my own demons to deal with (Witcher leaves the conversation)

SCENE THREE:

Dialogue(Witcher): Depends on the pay. I don't hunt legends for free, and I certainly don't hunt demons for "gratitude."

Dialogue(Erdesax): I respect that. No worries, as I told it is more important than all the golds so you can be sure I am ready to pay.

Dialogue(Witcher): Now, tell me about this "huge problem" of yours. (Go to SCENE TWO)

SCENE FOUR:

Descrition: Witcher jumps on her horse, rides is towards the location Erdesax mentions. The forest swallows sound. Branches twist unnaturally, forming shapes that almost resemble faces. There are sounds comes around everywhere inside the forest. Some are wolves and some are something different.

Dialogue(Witcher): Leshen is turning into the heart of the forest. It would have been easier If I just had to kill it before the curse's first steps.

Description: When witcher goes towards the sounds and wonder around wolves starts to run towards. Attacking her. Then after witcher slays four wolves, the half leshen half human rises from the ground. Screaming with unconfortable half monster half human voice.

Description: After killing the leshen she takes the heart, there are cuts behind the man who turned half leshen and it is the same as the symbol of Erdesax's amblem.

Choises:

1. Continue with the book (Go to SCENE FIVE)
2. Go to the meeting point if you get everything neccesary. (Go to SCENE SIX)
3.

SCENE FIVE:

Description The house is old. Rotting. Forgotten. Inside, dust blankets everything. No footprints. No life. The Witcher steps carefully. The entrance is goes toward different rooms. There are stairs left of the house. There are several rooms.

Descirption: The stairs goes both up and down. On the upper floor there is a old library filled with shelves, small pillars with differend items... One of the items is a teleportation stone. Which can teleport the person who holds it to a place they had already been.

Dialogue(Witcher): Hmm... A stone of teleportation. Maybe It can be helpful.

Description: If witcher grabs it, there will be wraiths rising from the floor to fight with him. Three ghosts.

Description: If witcher uses the senses and walks around the shelves, she will sense that a book can move. When she moves the book, the shelves will open and there will be a portal behind it.

Description: The portal opens a cave where there is a long hall of unshaped stones, behind there is also a shelves.

Dialogue(Witcher): To return I will use this I guess.

Description: The end of the cave, there are three mirrors and the place is enligted by the torchs. The mirror only reflects the Witcher but It seems like there is something behind the mirror, a corridor build with big stone blocks. And in the end of the stones, there is the book.

Dialogue(Witcher): My own reflection? Maybe I should find a way to stop me from being reflected so I can walk through.

> If the teleportation stone is taken :Dialogue(Witcher): Or maybe this stone might do something.

Description: Witcher needs to close the lights on the torches or she needs to use the stone to get in. If tries to hit the mirror, it cracks and there is nothing but a wall behind of it.

Description Either by turning the lights off or by using the stone Witcher finds herself behind the mirror. In front of her there is a long corridor and in the end of the corridor there is a pillar.

Dialogue(Witcher): It must be the book he wanted. Looks as ancient as it can be. But I can't read it. I am sure Erdesax can read it.

Choises:

1. Continue with the Leshen (Go to SCENE FOUR)
2. Go to the meeting point if you get everything neccesary. (Go to SCENE SIX)

SCENE SIX:

Description The last location is in front of the mountain. When witcher arrives she sees him standing there.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Finally! You have arrived!

Dialogue(Witcher): I get everything you wanted. Now what?

Dialogue(Erdesax): It is simple! We just need to go to the top of the mountain and there we will see the broken seal. Which we will improve it and make it stronger!

Choises.

1. I have this stone (Go to SCENE SEVEN)
2. Lets start to climb (Go to SCENE EIGHT)
3.

SCENE SEVEN:

Dialogue(Witcher): I have found this stone. Maybe it can be usefull to go up?
Dialogue(Erdesax): Oh! It would certainly do! That is a teleportation stone! I had been there! Give it to me so we can use it to go up instead climbing for hours.

Description: Witcher looks at the stone one last time then gives it to Erdesax. Then he holds her arm. Lights surrounds around them. When it fades away they are standing top of the mountain. (Go to SCENE NINE)

SCENE EIGHT:

Description They climb for whole day. It might be scene passed by video or whole way witcher can follow him. While climbing, they get attack by harpies. After the fight they continue their way to climb up. (Go to SCENE NINE)

SCENE NINE:

Description The top of the mountain there are eight pillars, eight have different symbol on it, where also has a ceiling made by stone as the pillars itselves. In the middle of the eight long pillar, there is mone small place which is a place to put the book.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Alright, give everyting to me. Just stand there and do not get close. If something accures you need to help me.

Description: Witcher hands everything to him. Erdesax goes between the pillars, puts the book on the pillar. Takes the heart in his hands.

Dialogue(Erdesax): You helped me a lot witcher. That is why I will return your favor when my true form is free!

Description: Erdesax crushes the heart between his hands then starts to read the spells from the book. The floor shakes, Symbols on the pillars glows. A thin light lines starts to move towards Erdesax.

Description: The ritual reaches a fever pitch. Erdesax's skin begins to crack like dry parchment, revealing a pulsing, violet light beneath. His voice loses its human warmth, vibrating with a tectonic resonance. The light from the pillars forms a cage—not for a demon, but a conduit for one.

Descirption: In order to stop Erdesax, witcher needs to break the pillars one by one using AARD. Otherwise pillars gives hp and power to Erdesax.

Description: The ritual is mid-way. The air is thick with the scent of ozone and rotting vegetation. Erdesax's eyes are no longer human; they glow with a flickering, sickly violet light. He turns to the Witcher, the Book of Old Priests hovering before him.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Stop, Witcher! Don't reach for that blade. Think for once. You kill monsters for coin, but look at you—shivering in the cold for a few crowns while the world rots.

Dialogue(Witcher): You're not reinforcing a seal. You're breaking it.

Dialogue(Erdesax): I am taking what was mine! I am rotting in this stupid body over a century! I missed the power, be able to do everything I want! I was a god! I coud do whatever I want. I will be again! I will grand wishes and take the souls instead. But you Witcher, join me! You helped me a lot I can give you more! Money, title, land... Whatever you want! No soul needed! Just help me to finish this rituel.

Choices:

1. I'm not a murderer, but I'm not a martyr either.(Go to SCENE TEN)
2. I've killed enough 'gods' to know they all bleed. (Go to SCENE ELEVEN)

SCENE TEN:

escription: The Witcher lowers her hand from the hilt of her sword. The violet light reflects in her eyes as the stone ceiling groans under the pressure of the raw power Erdesax is pulling from the void.

Dialogue(Witcher): I'm not a murderer, but I'm not a martyr either. If you're going to be a god, I'd rather be on your side than under your boot.

Dialogue(Erdesax): A wise choice, Witcher! But the void demands a tithe of blood to open fully! The old priests left guardians to ensure only the worthy could finish the rite!

Description: When Witcher chooses to help and waits, the defense mechanism of the pillars activates. Spectral guardians—wraiths of the old priests—rise from the ground to stop the ritual.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Keep them away from me! If they touch the pillars, the connection breaks! Protect the ritual, Witcher, and your reward will be beyond imagining!

Description: In this path, the Witcher must defend the pillars. She must fight off waves of wraiths that try to extinguish the violet light. If a wraith reaches a pillar, it resets Erdesax's progress.

Description: Once the final wave is defeated, the ritual completes. Erdesax's human form is torn apart by violet energy, and a shadow-being of immense power rises.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Finally! I am free! So Witcher, tell me what you want and I will grant it to you by the bound of the magic.

Choises:

1- I choose to send you the hell you were stuck (Go to SCENE TWELVE)
2- I want the coins of Kovir (Go to SCENE THIRTEEN)
3- I want a sword that is strong (Go to SCENE FOURTEEN)

SCENE ELEVEN:

Description: The Witcher spits on the frozen ground and draws her silver blade. The steel hums as it catches the unnatural light of the ritual.

Dialogue(Witcher): I've killed enough gods to know they all bleed. You talk too much, Erdesax. It's a common trait among those about to die.

Dialogue(Erdesax): Then perish with the rest of this pathetic world! I will use your bones to build my throne!

Description: Erdesax remains in the center, his body becoming a conduit for the violet energy. He cannot be harmed directly while the pillars are active. He lashes out with whips of shadow and summons spectral wraiths to protect him.

Description: In order to stop Erdesax, Witcher needs to break the pillars one by one using AARD. Otherwise pillars give HP and power to Erdesax.

Description: With the final pillar destroyed, the Witcher lunges, her blade piercing Erdesax's chest as his protection vanishes. The demonic energy implodes, pulling the hooded man into the void of his own making. The book snaps shut and turns to ash.

Dialogue(Witcher): No demon. No gold. Just another cold night in the north.

Description: She stands alone on the mountain peak. The village below is safe, even if they will never know the name of the woman who saved them.

SCENE TWELVE:

Description: The Witcher looks at the towering shadow-being, her hand tightening around the hilt of her silver sword. The air around the shadow-being vibrates with malevolent joy.

Dialogue(Witcher): You said you would grant me anything by the bond of magic. Well, I choose to send you back to the hell where you were stuck. Forever.

Dialogue(Erdesax): NO!I can grand you whatever you want! Gold! Women! Just ask and I will give you the kingdoms!

Dialogue(Witcher): That is my price. The price you have to pay. Now get the fuck out of here!

Dialogue(Erdesax): The bond... it is absolute! You treacherous filth! I will drag you with me!

Description: The violet energy that was once empowering Erdesax begins to invert, turning into a crushing gravitational force. The shadow-being is pulled toward the floor as a rift opens beneath him. He lashes out with claws of darkness, trying to pull the Witcher into the abyss with him.

Description: Witcher must succeed in a quick-time event to dodge the shadow-claws. As Erdesax is swallowed by the rift, the mountain peak begins to crumble. The Witcher barely escapes the collapsing stone ceiling as the magic vanishes, leaving nothing but a scarred mountaintop and a bitter wind.

SCENE THIRTEEN:

Description: The Witcher looks at the shadow-being, her expression cold and business-like. She ignores the screaming void behind him.

Dialogue(Witcher): I want the coins of Kovir. All of them. More than a Witcher could spend in ten lifetimes.

Dialogue(Erdesax): A petty request for a god, but the bond is sealed. Greed is a flavor I find... delicious.

Description: Erdesax raises a shadow-hand, and the air begins to shimmer. Heavy, iron-bound chests begin to materialize out of thin air, crashing onto the stone floor. They overflow with gold coins, jewels, and ancient Koviri mint.

Dialogue(Witcher): It’ll do.

Description: Erdesax laughs and vanishes into the sky, leaving a trail of purple smoke. The Witcher stands alone with enough wealth to buy a kingdom, but as she looks at the gold, she notices it leaves a faint, black stain on her gloves that won't wash off. She begins the long process of hauling the heavy price of her soul down the mountain.

SCENE FOURTEEN:

Description: The Witcher stares into the void where Erdesax's eyes should be. She doesn't want gold or titles; she wants the only thing that keeps her alive.

Dialogue(Witcher): I want a sword that is strong. A blade that can cut through any armor, mortal or monster.

Dialogue(Erdesax): A warrior's wish. I shall forge it from the very essence of the rift you helped me open.

Description: Erdesax reaches into his own shadow-chest and pulls out a shard of pure, solidified darkness. He plunges it into the Witcher's own silver sword. The blade glows with an intense violet heat before turning a deep, matte black with glowing runes etched into the metal.

Dialogue(Erdesax): It is called 'Fate-Breaker.' It will never dull, and it will never break. But remember, Witcher—every life it takes feeds the hunger of the world I come from.

Description: The Witcher takes the blade. It feels lighter than air but hums with a terrifying power. Erdesax vanishes into the clouds, his work finished. The Witcher sheathes the dark blade, knowing that while she is now the deadliest hunter on the Continent, she has become a part of the darkness she used to hunt.